PREFACE.

A SHORT explanation of the aim and scope of the present work may not be out of place. As to the usefulness of such a book there can be no question, for the great number of cases in our State reports, and the consequent multiplication of citations of earlier cases, make some such help an absolute necessity. It is almost a truism to say that the present value of any decision can only be ascertained by an examination of the later cases, in which it is cited and commented on, and it is only after such an examination that it can be safely used as an authority on a trial or appeal.

The aim of the author has been to present all* the citations of New York cases in the opinions of the Court contained in the various volumes of the reports of the State, and also all the appeals, cases affirmed, reversed, or modified, and appeals dismissed. The careful examination of the appeals has been a most laborious undertaking, and the author believes that the result attained will be found satisfactory. The only exception to the system of including every citation has been made in the case of the Transcript Appeals. Where a citation appears in a case reported both in the Transcript and in the New York Reports, the citation is given merely as in the latter, the former being very scarce and not so reliable as the official series.

All the New York cases reported in the Albany Law Journal and the Weekly Digest, and cited in the volumes of reports, have been given, and also some recent appeals which at the time of publication were only reported in those periodicals.

Cases which have been cited from these two publications, and which have also since been reported in the regular series, have been cited from the latter.

* Subject only to this necessary modification, that when a decision is cited several times in the same case, the first citation only is given.

The orthography given is that of cases themselves, and cross-references have been liberally used to point out important variations of names. In the alphabetical arrangement, all abbreviations take the place of the names they represent.

In a work of this character, it may be well to remind the reader that ideal completeness and accuracy are impossible. The most careful author is only human, and therefore liable to err; copyists, however closely watched, make occasional slips; and the printer adds a generous share of mistakes to the common stock. Another source of perplexity is not to be entirely avoided even by the greatest care; that is, the mistakes in the reports themselves, the citations of the wrong names, volumes, or pages. These are due to careless reporting, and although several thousands have been corrected, it cannot be hoped that it is possible to get rid of them all.

To guard against all such errors has been the constant and earnest endeavor of the author, and although he knows that absolute perfection is unattainable in a book, composed, like this, entirely of proper names and figures, yet he can say that every effort has been used to insure completeness and accuracy, and that it represents some years of work, laborious and exacting to the last degree.

THEODORE CONNOLY.
